

1. Increased Budget

- The Budget needs to be increased because the prisoners are not having the resources to be successful. They aren't getting good food, the food there is disgusting and their bodies are getting used to this food and when they are out of jail they don't eat food for weeks because their stomachs have to get used to real food. Also they need to give the inmates proper medical assistance for sickness, the prisoners aren't getting the right types of treatment from their nurses and doctors. The Prisons can save money if they don't make things so expensive or if they give the inmates more money per hour. The inmates need to also be able to get into hobbies so they have something to do when they are feeling stressed or angry. The inmates are only used to letting their anger out in a hostile way but they need to learn how to play an instrument or grab a coloring pencil or learn how to write stories and poems. (13,12)
- Increasing the prisons budgets will get them to have better resources that way the jails will be able to have a higher success rate and they won't be over crowded. The budget is a very big deal most of the time they have a pretty big budget but it doesn't go to the right places. Jails need a lot of work and yes they are mostly privately owned but they should all follow the same guidelines and they should all have the best interest in the inmates and not on others opinions.

2. Some prisoners get paid 2 cents per hour and can't afford their necessities

- If the jails give the prisoners more of an income then the prisoners will be less likely to mess up in the real world. When the prisoners get out and get a real job they won't know what to do with the money and they will just spend it on whatever. If they had more money in the jails then they would be able to save up and learn how to manage money and budget the expenses. The inmates are able to always make phone calls and video, but if they had more money or if they would have the phone companies not charge to call outside the jail. (12)
- Along with giving them a better income that also connects with learning how to budget money and praising positive actions. They will realize what they are doing is right and they will want to be more successful. The inmates will be less likely to return to prison if they are more aware of what is going to happen when they get out of jail.

3. Inmates can't afford shampoo and conditioner because of how expensive it is

- When the inmates aren't able to afford the necessities then they will not be able to clean themselves properly and they are more likely to get infections and not be able to have the healthy skin and health. The inmates have previously said that they want to be in a safe, healthy, environments. The Prisons should make the health/cleaning items less costly and affordable for all inmates. (12)
- This will help them wanting to be cleaner and take care of their health, it will boost their confidence, and it will want them to better themselves. They will be more motivated to do their jobs and to get better "grades" if they take school courses. They are going to feel better, which will make them happier and less emotional/angry.

4. Get better doctors that can work with inmates and who are highly recommended and doctors who treat the inmates for the right things.
